

THE CARE OF SOULS: A WORKSHOP FOR PROFESSIONAL CARETAKERS ON BRINGING THE DEPTH OF SOUL TO THEIR WORK

THOMAS MOORE, PhD

Thomas Moore is the author of Care of the Soul, which has sold millions of copies, and twenty-five other books. The most recent are A Religion of One's Own, Ageless Soul, and Gospel, a new translation and commentary of the four New Testament Gospels. He has been a psychotherapist for over thirty years, has a Ph.D. in Religious Studies from Syracuse University, and has won many awards for his work. He often speaks for Jung Societies, medical conferences, and churches. He is also one of the leading teachers of Archetypal Psychology developed by his friend James Hillman and supervises therapists with a depth orientation.

For thirty years and with many formats Thomas Moore has taught psychiatrists, psychotherapists, doctors and nurses, teachers and other professional helpers add the dimension of soul to their work. Soul means depth, connection, heart, imagination, empathy, and an appreciation for flawed humanity. Professional helpers need to care for their own souls as well as the souls of those they serve.

People are mysterious, their emotions complex and their histories unique. Soul is the foundation and essence of a person, and so a helper needs depth of vision to help at a level that counts. This workshop will offer ideas and skills needed to be a soulful helper. Such an approach is not only effective for those who are helped but offers deeper satisfaction to the professional.

PARTICIPANTS CAN EXPECT:

- an engaged presentation with an opportunity to be transformed
- to find that a soul-oriented approach brings a degree of richness and vision
- to learn what soul is, how it differs from spirit, and how to get to know your own soul and the soul of others
- to apply this ancient and exciting idea to their work
